Registration is a condition to voting, and to-morrow the registration begins in this city and Brooklyn. The registration offices will be open from S A. M. till 9 P. M., thus affording every man ample opportunity to see that his name is duly entered as a voter. There are four days in this month in which one can register, and if he fail to do so he cannot cast a vote at the elections of next month.

Indolence or disgust at the chicanery of political demagogues lead many a man of the kind whose vote is the most important to disdain casting a ballot. The sense that one vote in the right direction counts so little that it is more reasonable and dignified to omit casting it than to cast it ineffectively is a sophistry. Every man should cast his vote as a duty, and he should cast it seconding to the best of his judgment. To do what is right is always the correct thing, whatever the conse

Let every citizen register and cast his vote, then, as the only manly course citizen can maintain in this matter.

DODGING THE TABIFF.

The feverish rush on the part of steamers with incoming cargoes last Saturday that their goods might be entered before the regulations of the new Tariff had gone into effect was an amusing commentary on the new law. But not all the craft innocent fashion enough, and might some heading for this port were actuated to the times prevent awkward mi-takes.
